DETAILED ACTION

1. This NON-FINAL office action is in response to application 10/666,619, appeal brief filed 8/18/2008. Claims 1-19 are currently pending in this application.
2. The non-final rejection dated 8/9/2007 of claims 1-19 has been withdrawn. A new ground(s) of rejection has been made.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

4. Claims 1-5, 11-12 and 16-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Kurshan et al. (US 6,311,293).
5. With respect to claims 1, 11 and 16, Kurshan teaches:

Generate (given a generator for the state space, Col 4, lines 45-50), from a first property (for a given property, Col 3, lines 55-65), a first assumption (set of assumable values, Col 3, lines 5-20) including a first state predicate (the system model's reachable states from a designated set of initial states, Col 2, lines 5-10);

generate (given a generator for the state space of the system model, Col 4, lines 45-50), for a model (of the system model, Col 4, lines 45-50), a first transition relation (a set of state transition relations, Col 4, lines 40-55) that includes the first state predicate (that for each state identifies the state or set of reachable states that can be reached from the initial state, Col 4, lines 40-55); and reduce the first transition relation (reduce the model, i.e. transition relations are simplified, Col 4, lines 60-65) according to the first assumption (set of assumable values, Col 3, lines 5-20).

6. With respect to claim 2, Kurshan teaches:

wherein reducing the first transition relation reduces the size of the model (reduce the size of the system model, Col 2 lines 25-35).

7. With respect to claim 3, Kurshan teaches:

wherein reducing the first transition relation reduces the computational complexity of evaluating the first property (reduction in the complexity of the tested system's model, Col 3, lines 55-65).

8. With respect to claim 4, Kurshan teaches:

wherein reducing the first transition relation reduces the number of variables in the model (a reduction in the complexity of the system's model which involves determining variables that do not change value, see Abstract).

9. With respect to claim 5, Kurshan teaches:

wherein reducing the first transition relation reduces the number of variables in the first transition relation (simplify the state transition relations, when a variable is found to be an unchanging constant, Col 4, lines 60-67).

10. With respect to claims 12 and 17, Kurshan teaches:

wherein the first assumption is produced from the structure of the first property (set of assumable values for that variable or input, Col 3, lines 5-20).

Allowable Subject Matter

11. Claims 6-10 and 13-15 and 18-19 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

12. With respect to claim 6, the prior art of record fails to explicitly teach: wherein the first assumption is generated from an implication structure of the first property.

13. With respect to claims 13, the prior art of record fails to explicitly teach:

means for propagating the first assumption according to a second property to generate a second assumption; and means for producing, for a model, a transition relation that includes the reduced next state function.

14. With respect to claim 18, the prior art of record fails to teach:

instructions to cause the processing device to: propagate the first assumption to generate a second assumption according to a second state predicate.
